

IV. PROGRAM AND TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

Introduction

Despite Montana's vastness, or perhaps because of it, a tremendous network of individuals, organizations and agencies sharing historic preservation information has developed. This chapter identifies many in that network that can assist preservation efforts by providing information in the context of established programs, by making referrals to others who might be able to help, or by simply sharing their own experiences and observations. The information is not all-inclusive in this directory. Directory users who know of other sources of assistance and/or have corrections are urged to call the Montana State Historic Preservation Office (406) 444-7715.

The Montana Historical Society

The Montana Historical Society was established as a non-profit organization, sustained by memberships, various earned income activities (sales, admissions), and philanthropic contributions. The Society is also a department of the state government and as such, provides technical assistance and other support in various areas of expertise. These include museum management, an extensive library and archives, a publications program, a museum facility and a bookstore. They also provide specific sources of information to agencies of state and local government and to the public. The Society maintains technical assistance in historic preservation and this information can be found within the State Historic Preservation Office or by contacting the Montana Historic Preservation Review Board.

The State Historic Preservation Office

Under the National Historic Preservation Acts of 1966, states were given certain responsibilities regarding the provisions of the Act. In each state, these responsibilities have been typically assigned to the State Historic Preservation Office (SHPO). In Montana, SHPO is a program within the Montana Historical Society. The staff includes those persons with expertise in the fields of history, historical architecture, architectural history, archaeology and public administration. The SHPO provides assistance in a variety of areas including the following:

➤ The National Register of Historic Places

The SHPO provides information on National Register properties and what it means to have a property listed in the National Register, criteria for listing and also staff assistance with the preparation and review of nominations.

➤ Historic Building Maintenance and Rehabilitation

The SHPO historic architects are available to answer questions and provide some on site assistance regarding the maintenance and rehabilitation of older buildings, homes, businesses and public buildings. Assistance is available on how to address issues such as energy conservation and handicapped accessibility.

➤ Archaeological Sites and Research

SHPO archaeologists can assist in determining the significance of prehistoric sites and in identifying methods for preservation.

➤ Tax Incentives for Preservation

Information is available on tax incentives for preservation projects, available through state and federal guidelines for those interested in pursuing these benefits.

➤ Community Surveys

The SHPO provides technical and financial assistance to communities interested in conducting surveys of their area's historic and archaeological resources. Surveys are often the first step in identifying properties and districts that are significant in local, state and national history.

➤ The PLACES Program (Peoples, Lands and Cultural Environments)

The SHPO is conducting historical and archaeological research relating to the land, the history of human interaction with the landscape and the resources that have been left or affected. This effort will provide a more multi-disciplinary approach to historic preservation in the state.

➤ National Register Signs

Sites listed on the National Register of Historic Places are eligible to acquire a special National Register sign specifically designed for sites in Montana. A portion of the Montana accommodation tax subsidizes the cost of the sign that may be purchased by the property owner at a reasonable cost.

➤ Local Government and Grant Assistance

The SHPO offers assistance to local governments in developing preservation programs. This includes support for local preservation commissions through the Certified Local Government Program.

➤ State and Federal Agency Responsibilities

The SHPO provides information regarding the procedures that state and federal agencies must follow to consider historic and archaeological resources in their activities and programs.

➤ Preservation Education

The SHPO offers a number of publications including newsletters, planning bulletins and technical leaflets published by the National Park Service, the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation and the National Trust for Historic Preservation. The SHPO provides assistance in the development of preservation education programs and the SHPO staff is available to make presentations to schools, civic groups and historical societies.

The Montana Historic Preservation Review Board

The Historic Preservation Review Board is comprised of preservation professionals and interested citizens appointed by the Governor for four year terms. The board reviews nominations to the National Register and makes recommendations to the National Park Service regarding their findings. Individual members of the board may be contacted for information and referrals. They are listed below:

Certified Local Government Program

A number of communities in the state are participating in the Certified Local Government (CLG) Program. These communities have local preservation officers and commissions who can provide technical assistance in historic preservation and make referrals where necessary. Following is a list of CLG communities and a contact person for each CLG area:

www.montanahistoricalsociety.com/shpo/clglist.htm

Universities and Colleges

Montana's universities, colleges, community colleges and other educational institutions can provide assistance in preservation depending on the interest of their faculty and their areas of specialization. Often assistance can be found within specific departments including Native American studies, archaeology, history, architecture, civil engineering, construction, land use planning, anthropology and art history. In addition, the University System has special placement programs that direct student interns to projects through each department's individual intern program. Further information can be obtained by contacting the Cooperative Education Program or a particular department chairperson at the university or college in your area.

Montana Department of Fish, Wildlife and Parks

Many of Montana's state parks include a variety of heritage resources. One example is Bannack, Montana's first territorial capital and a National Historic Landmark District, which is a State Park. The personnel of the state parks develop interpretive and preservation plans for sites under their jurisdiction and often participate in local and regional efforts to preserve, develop and interpret historic and prehistoric sites. National Park Service

Responsible for the general administration of the nation's historic preservation program, the National Park Service published technical brochures and other materials and periodic technical briefing documents including Cultural Resources Management and Preservation Briefs. Additional information regarding NPS publications can be obtained through the State Historical Preservation Office in Helena.

The National Park Service maintains a number of sites in Montana, including the Grant-Kohrs Ranch, Nez Perce National Historic Park (the Big Hole Battlefield, Bear's Paw and Canyon Creek sites), the Little Big Horn, the Big Horn Canyon National Recreation Area, and Glacier and Yellowstone National Parks. The NPS staff at these sites are often available to provide technical assistance to communities in areas of preservation, collections handling and interpretation. For technical assistance contact:

The Advisory Council on Historic Preservation

The Advisory Council on Historic Preservation advises the President, Congress, various government agencies and members of the public on ways to further the national commitment to historic preservation. The Council is particularly responsible for addressing the adverse effects of federal undertakings on historic resources under Section 106 and Section 110 of the National Historic Preservation Act of 1966.

The Council coordinates federal government activities to assure that preservation objectives are duly considered in decision making. The Council is made up of members who represent different disciplines and regions of the United States. Questions directed to the Council are typically those related to federal undertakings and historic preservation. Contact also can be made through the Montana State Historic Preservation Office.

Public Land Management Agencies

Information and technical assistance in historic preservation is also available through those agencies that are responsible for the management of public lands (see Chapter III). In many areas of Montana, state and federal governments are the principal landowners and the many historic and archaeological resources located on these public lands are under their direct management and protection. Following is a listing of major state and federal land management agencies that have staff who deal day-to-day with historic preservation issues. Many of the contacts listed can also provide information on permitting procedures associated with activities that take place on public lands.

NATIONAL NON-PROFIT AND OTHER Private Organizations

The National Trust for Historic Preservation

A national non-profit organization chartered by Congress, the National Trust for Historic Preservation encourages public participation in the preservation of sites, buildings and objects significant in American history and culture. The Trust is headquartered in Washington, D. C., and maintains six regional offices throughout the United States. Regional office staffs make field visits, give technical and financial assistance and act as the point of contact for preservation organizations and agencies in their regions. In addition to their loan and grant programs described in Chapter III, the Dollars for Preservation Act, the Trust also has a publications department, The Preservation Press, that provides information on a number of historic preservation topics. The Trust offers a variety of seminars and conferences including its annual convention on diverse topics related to site preservation, heritage tourism, rural and urban preservation challenges and the Main Street revitalization. The Preservation Forum is a program that offers continuing education and technical information through a series of publications made available to forum members. Montana Easement Holding Organizations

At this time, there are no organizations in Montana limited to the acquisition and management of historic preservation easements. However, from time to time, organizations that are chartered to acquire and manage easements for wildlife, open space and watershed values have accepted easement donations on cultural resources. This typically occurs when the cultural resources are located on properties having these natural resource values. For example, an easement on agricultural land may include an historic ranch house, an archaeological site or a heritage landscape. Further information may be obtained by contacting:
